

Reptile Thefts

Two separate reptile thefts.

Posted: November 5, 2007, 2 a.m. EST

Iguana Stolen From Refuge

The Back to Nature Wildlife Refuge is asking for help finding an iguana named Spike.

Staffers said someone broke into the refuge Sunday night, and stole the 5-and-a-half foot iguana.

Spike is unique, because he has an orange tinge to his color, instead of the normal green. He was used in their educational programs.

To read the full article, click here.

Snakes Stolen From Home

A 6-foot boa constrictor and 10 other snakes were stolen during a house burglary in West Midlands, England.

Police Officers told BBC News the offenders put the reptiles, which included corn snakes and a 4-foot Kingsnake, into an empty cage and cloth sack.

A West Midlands Police spokesman said: "None of the snakes is believed to be dangerous, but all have special dietary needs and are likely to die if left without the necessary care."

To read the full article, click here.